E-cigs could see ban in bars, restaurants

Take it outside. City Council might restrict where you smoke e-cigarettes and prevent minors from buying them.

The vapor may dissipate on Thursday.

Electronic-cigarette smokers could find out this week whether their devices will be allowed inside bars and restaurants, or instead will be forced to take them outside.

City Council will vote on a bill that would tack the electronic devices onto the existing smoke-free law and add another bill that would ban the sale of e-cigarette devices and supplies to minors.

Electronic cigarettes are battery-powered devices that electrically burn a nicotine-based liquid that is vaporized and then inhaled and exhaled. While the electronic cigarettes are not a tobacco-based product, they do contain the stimulant nicotine.

Since the U.S. Food and Drug Administration has not yet regulated the product, the contents of the liquid are still questionable, said City Councilman Bill Greenlee, who is the main sponsor of the bills.

Without the proper regulation, e-cigarettes are a public health matter, he added.

"We don't think it's right [to let users to smoke them indoors] given that there are still a lot of questions about what this product emits," he said. "There are all kind of guesses as to what goes into these things, but there are no documented facts about what products are in the vapor.

"I think what we're talking about here is erring on the side of caution," he added.

Jason Healy, president of e-cigarette company blu eCigs, argues that his devices emit no tobacco smoke, ash, tar or smell.

He conceded that it is partly true that nicotine does form the addiction to tobacco products, "but if it was the entire picture, then we would have an issue out here with gums and patches, which, by the way, delivers far more nicotine than even a cigarette."

"So, it's the whole ecosystem of smoking that is the equation," he said.

Greenlee admitted that these devices are not as dangerous as tobacco.

"We don't have the proof of that," he said. "But we would certainly say there are enough alarms to say there could be some problems here."

Healy said, as was the case in other cities like New York and Los Angeles, city officials are making decisions with "little to no information."

"And they're basing these theories on conjecture," he said. "As everyone knows, there is a real ideological hatred of smoking — and because e-cigs appear to do that, they get lumped into the same basket. But regardless, if God himself came down and said e-cigs are good, some people will just turn off."

Healy called e-cigs a sheep in wolf's clothing. "We look and act like a cigarette, but we're not. But it's also the same aspects of the product that makes it successful."

The smoke-free ban went into effect in 2007. Labeled the Clean Indoor Air Worker Protection Law, the bill banned smoking in workplaces, restaurants and bars, as well as outdoor seating areas and patios at these locations or within 20 feet of commercial building entrances. The only exceptions are neighborhood bars that make a majority of their sales from booze.

Chris Mullins, owner of McGillin's Olde Ale House in Center City, said he rarely sees people smoking e-cigs at the bar — maybe one or two on weekends.

"It's so different from cigarette smoke," he said. "It doesn't smell. As far as we know, it's not harmful to people. It doesn't bother anybody. It seems like an odd thing to enact. If people think it's a gateway to smoking real cigarettes, then I can understand that. But there's no second-hand vapor."

Other state bans

The three largest cities in the United States — New York, Los Angeles and Chicago — have all enacted specific bans on the devices.

- About 25 states have banned the sale to minors.
- A statewide bill for Pennsylvania is working its way through the state legislature in Harrisburg.

Greenlee

It's a drag

Questions remain

The main concern revolves around the presence of nicotine — what scientists believe is the main ingredient that hooks cigarette smokers. Since nicotine is an active ingredient in these devices, will teenagers or young adults who experiment with the product become addicted? When asked if this product would actually help smokers quit, or push habitual cigarette smokers, Healy said there is as much nicotine in his devices (based on the level chosen) as there is in the patches used to aid quitters.

Ross Fineman, 22, California

"I had an e-cig and didn't smoke it indoors. I personally thought it was rude. When others do it, I don't mind, but it is a distraction. I don't know if it's worth banning. It's more of an etiquette question."

Brandon Kleckner, 28, Allentown

"I've been around e-cigs a lot, and they don't make me cough, so I don't really care."

ATTENTION MEN WHO WERE PRESCRIBED TESTOSTERONE

STUDIES INDICATE INCREASED RISK OF: STROKE • HEART ATTACK • DEATH

NEWS ALERT

If you or a loved one suffered a heart attack while taking prescription testosterone therapy, you may be entitled to compensation for your injuries. Alarming new research suggests that millions of men may be at risk for a heart attack, stroke or premature death by taking testosterone therapy.

Are you a male? Were you taking Testosterone for "Low T"? Have you had a heart attack? Were you taking AndroGel®, AndroDerm®, Axiron®, Testim® or other testosterone treatments when you suffered the heart attack?

Recently published medical studies have shown that prescription testosterone therapies may double a man's risk of suffering a heart attack.

Despite these alarming studies, men using testosterone therapy weren't warned of its potential dangers.

In response to the studies, the FDA has launched an investigation into testosterone therapy products and their reported association with life-threatening cardiovascular events.

If you believe that you or a loved one have been injured as a result of prescription testosterone therapy, contact us to recover full compensation for your injuries.

'Trash.' Advocates criticize bill delay

Legislation to require district-to-district notification of any investigation of a teacher for sexual misconduct moved forward this week, but advocates complain the bill could have been made law months ago.

"This bill could have been signed into law already by this time," said Terri Miller, board president of Stop Educator Sexual Abuse Misconduct & Exploitation.

State Sen. Anthony Williams introduced a bill more than a year ago to require potential teachers to disclose any past allegations or investigations for sexual abuse or misconduct, closing what is known as the "pass the trash" loophole.

While it was voted through the state Senate and House Education Committee, a new, identical bill, introduced by state Rep. David Maloney, is in play, having passed the House Education Committee on Wednesday.

"Children are in jeopardy as long as either one of these bills is sitting without becoming law," Miller said.

"Why are they opting for a bill that was basically cut and pasted from our bill?" SAM NEWHOUSE

Pass the trash?

Current law has allowed some teachers accused of misconduct to resign their positions before sexual abuse charges became a matter of record, in what is known as the "pass the trash" loophole.

- The language of both bills SB46 and HB2063 state that anyone applying to work for a public or private school must provide employment history and disclose whether any charges of abuse or sexual misconduct had been filed against them.

Man dead after NE Philly Dumpster crash

A 23-year-old man was hospitalized with broken bones and his passenger, 28, died when they crashed, at high speed, into a fire hydrant and Dumpster in Bustleton, according to reports.

Police said two men were driving in a Volkswagen Touareg about 4:30 a.m. Sunday on the 9300 block of Krewstown Road when they lost control. The car reportedly crashed into a fire hydrant, then careened into a parked car, in which a man was sleeping. He was not injured.

The car reportedly then continued into the Krewstown Shopping Center parking lot and hit a Dumpster, then ran into a Citizens Bank drive-thru before stopping. METRO

Nutter, Corbett leave for Vatican

Mayor Michael Nutter and Gov. Tom Corbett departed Sunday night from Philadelphia International Airport to the Vatican in Rome for a planning session in advance of Philadelphia hosting the 2015 Catholic Church's World Meeting of Families.

As previously announced, Nutter and Corbett are hoping that Pope Francis I will elect to visit Philadelphia for the event.

Corbett and Nutter will be abroad together for a three-day visit scheduled to include meetings with the Pontifical Council for the Family.

They will also be part of a rare, private audience with Argentina-born Pope Francis, who was chosen as the pope in March 2013.

Pope Benedict XVI attended the last World Meeting of Families in 2012 in Milan, Italy, which drew more than a million people to the city. METRO

THOU SHALT NOT MESS WITH WAWA

Whenever I read about a Wawa getting held up, it makes me want to cry inside. Wawas are sacred places and should be respected, not robbed.

A Wawa on Roosevelt Boulevard in the Northeast got robbed Friday by a guy who drove off on a motorcycle. On St. Patrick's Day, police said a man robbed the Wawa on Cottman Avenue in Burlhome. Luckily, police arrested a suspect the next day after the man was recognized on a store surveillance video, released by police.

Quoted

I left the Philadelphia area in the 1990s and moved to Fayetteville, N.C. It was quite the culture shock for a "Philly chick" like me. I learned to love fried okra — mostly because I discovered that foods fried in lard are DELICIOUS. But there were no Wawas.

Of course, Philadelphians turned in the gunman. The dude broke a local Commandment: Thou Shalt Not Mess with Wawa. Let's hope the other thief gets caught soon, too. The coffee, hoagies and Tastykakes must be protected.

I love Wawa with a passion made stronger because I lived in the South for 10 years and had to do without. No Wawa milk, no turkey-n-gravy in a bowl, no flavored coffee creamers.

I left the Philadelphia area in the 1990s and moved to Fayetteville, N.C., for a newspaper job there. It was quite the culture shock for a "Philly chick" like me. People spoke with funny accents, drank iced tea out of jelly jars and ate fried okra. I learned to love fried okra — mostly because I discovered that foods fried in lard are DELICIOUS. But there were no Wawas.

Instead, there were stores called "The Pantry." They featured foods with which I was not acquainted, such as pickled eggs — glowing ruby red in a jar full of brine. There were pork rinds. Actually, there were several kinds of pork rinds, like original, barbecue and baked (because that makes them healthier?). Also, boiled peanuts in a can and something called "potted meat."

My friends in Fayetteville tell me "The Pantry" stores are now called "Kangaroo Express" and they feature their own brand of coffee. Oh and pork rinds, of course.

My Philly-born mother and sister moved to Central Florida years ago, but never forgot about Wawa. Recently, Wawa expanded its stores into the state and one of the stores opened in Casselberry, Fla., just minutes from my family. My sister and her husband drove there on the first day that Wawa was open for business. There was already a line and it was out the door.

After a bit of a wait, my family got their hoagies — a thousand miles from Philadelphia — and they were happy. And if Wawa wants to add fried okra to their menu of sides, that would make me happy, too.

French satellite image also shows possible plane debris

French satellite images show "floating debris" in the southern Indian Ocean, Paris said on Sunday, which together with Chinese and Australian images of suspicious objects in the same wide area have focused the search for a missing Malaysian jetliner in remote seas off Australia.

The new lead came as the international search for Malaysia Airlines Flight MH370 entered its third week, with still no confirmed trace of the Boeing 777 that vanished with 239 people on board.

"This morning, Malaysia received new satellite images from the French authorities showing potential objects in the vicinity of the southern corridor," the Malaysian Transport Ministry said in a statement. "Malaysia immediately relayed these images to the Australian rescue coordination center."

Australian Prime Minister Tony Abbott had said there was "increasing hope" of a breakthrough in the hunt for the plane on the strength of Chinese and Australian images of possible large debris. REUTERS

Distance

2.5K

The debris in the Australian image was about 2,500 kilometers southwest of Perth. The Chinese sighting, captured two days later, was 120 kilometers "south by west" of that.

Pilot shared his flight simulator passion online

Some trace of the passion that Zaharie Ahmad Shah had for flying can be found in the trail of e-mail exchanges and online message board posts that detail the Malaysia Airlines pilot's construction of a state-of-the-art flight simulator at home.

Now the stack of computer monitors, graphics cards and software he painstakingly sourced and improved is being pored over by investigators trying to make sense of the disappearance more than two weeks ago of the passenger jet he was piloting. REUTERS

Ukraine's top diplomat says risk of war with Russia grows

Ukraine's foreign minister said the chances of war with Russia are increasing as thousands of Russian troops gather on his country's border.

"We are ready to respond," Foreign Minister Andrii Deshchytsia said in an interview broadcast on ABC-TV's "This Week" program.

"The Ukraine government is trying to use all the peaceful, diplomatic means to stop Russians, but the people are also ready to defend their homeland," he said.

Senator Robert Menendez of New Jersey, the Democratic chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, called for an "urgent re-examination" of U.S. and European policies toward Russia. BLOOMBERG

At the border. NATO commander warns of Russian threat to Moldova

NATO's top military commander said on Sunday Russia had built up a "very sizeable" force on its border with Ukraine and Moscow may have a region in another ex-Soviet republic, Moldova, in its sights after annexing Crimea.

Russia was acting more like an adversary than a partner, NATO's Supreme Allied Commander Europe, U.S. Air Force General Philip Breedlove said, and the 28-nation alliance should rethink the positioning and readiness of its forces in eastern Europe.

Russian troops, using armored vehicles, automatic weapons and stun grenades, seized some of the last military facilities under Ukrainian control on Saturday in Crimea, the Black Sea peninsula that Russian President Vladimir Putin formally annexed the day before.

Breedlove was one of several Western officials and politicians to warn on Sunday that Russia may not stop there in a crisis that has taken East-West relations lurching back towards the Cold War.

U.S. Sen. John McCain, a Republican foreign policy specialist, told Britain's BBC that Putin's actions in Ukraine were akin to those of Adolf Hitler in 1930s Germany. REUTERS

Elephants escape from St. Louis circus, damage two vehicles

Three elephants escaped from a circus in suburban St. Louis on Saturday, damaging two vehicles but causing no injuries before they were captured, a circus spokesman said.

The pachyderms busted out the back entrance of Family Arena in St. Charles, Mo., at about 5:30 p.m. local time between performances of the Moolah Shrine Circus, said event spokesman Dennis Burkholder.

They were in a private holding area and escaped into an employee parking lot, Burkholder said. It is unclear how they got out, he added. REUTERS

Ruling to strike down Michigan gay marriage ban put on hold

A U.S. appeals court on Saturday placed a temporary hold on a federal judge's ruling that struck down Michigan's ban on gay marriage, a move that followed hastily arranged and joyful wedding ceremonies in the state.

The decision by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit came one day after the lower court's ruling, which briefly made Michigan the 18th state in the nation to allow same-sex marriage.

With a temporary stay granted, same-sex couples married on Saturday could find themselves in legal limbo. REUTERS

Violated air space. Turkish F-16 shoots down Syrian plane

A Turkish F-16 fired a rocket at the Syrian jet and it crashed around 1,300 yards inside Syrian territory. / GETTY IMAGES

Turkish armed forces shot down a Syrian plane on Sunday which Turkey said had crossed into its air space in an area where Syrian rebels have been battling President Bashar al-Assad's forces for control of a border crossing.

"A Syrian plane violated our airspace," Prime Minister Tayyip Erdogan told an election rally in northwest Turkey. "Our F-16s took off and hit this plane. Why? Because if you violate my airspace, our slap after this will be hard."

Syria condemned what it called a "blatant aggression" and said the jet was pursuing rebel fighters inside Syria. It said the pilot had managed to eject before the plane crashed.

The Turkish general staff said one of its control centers detected two Syrian MIG-23s around 1 p.m. and warned them four times after they came close to the Turkish border. REUTERS

We check in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Today, Rose McGowan is eavesdropping, Lena Dunham isn't ashamed of her curiosity and Steve Martin makes East Coasters hate him.

@rosemcgowan: "I wish there was a drive thru salad bar" overheard awesomeness. LA nights

@lenadunham: In my heart it's socially acceptable to politely ask "'scuse me sir, is that your wife or your daughter?"

@SteveMartinToGo: Temperature fluctuating wildly between 80 and 81 requires constant maintenance of ice cubes in tea. Tiresome.

Cher dons bikini, headdress on tour

Despite having a huge "Farewell" tour in 2005, Cher is back at it — and now in a bikini — for her "Dressed To Kill" concert series. The 67-year-old (!) kicked off the tour on Saturday in Phoenix and looked good, despite admitting to a ton of technical/wig difficulties.

In a series of posts on Twitter, she wrote, "B4 showtime I was being fitted 4 costumes! Shoe man is punk, No boots, shoes! Learned new choreog yesterday. New wigs 2Nite! Killed ourselves ... Everything was so last min. Some wigs weren't perfect, but some just needed change. Never had costumes on till unite."

It seems like the costume drama is continuing from last week when Cher announced that Bob Mackie, her designer of 42 years, was bowing out from outfitting the singer for this tour.

"The man who made all my costumes since 1972 decided he couldn't do my last tour. No matter how disappointed any of u are, you don't know my grief ... Felt I had to tell you. I'm crying," she wrote. However, all of the crying seems to have done Cher good — who can wear an outfit like that at 67 without their family considering shipping them off to assisted living?

Cher is "Dressed To Kill."

The Kimye Vogue cover backlash

Are you, like I am, curious about the amount of attention being paid to Kim Kardashian and Kanye West on the cover of Vogue? Let me enlighten you.

Here's the backstory: Vogue's editor Anna Wintour allegedly had never wanted Kim Kardashian on the cover of the storied fashion bible. Why? Well, despite Kardashian's successes in the fashion industry, girlfriend basically rose to fame via a sex tape and a reality TV show on E! And homie (in this case, Anna Wintour) don't play that; homie only plays upmarket.

However, it looks like Wintour is singing a different tune since Kardashian hooked up with Kanye West. Reports flew around the Internet that West was on a one-man battle to get his fiancee on the cover. And he did: On Friday, the cover for Vogue's April issue landed with the couple in full wedding regalia with the headline "Their Fashionable Life and Surreal Times #WORLDSMOSTTALKEDABOUTCOUPLE." ("Forget my shock about putting Kim Kardashian on the cover — I'm more disappointed Vogue used a hashtag on their cover," quipped a Metro editor.)

JAMES FRANCO AND SETH ROGEN
TWITTER

It's been big news all weekend, with Sarah Michelle Gellar tweeting: "Well……I guess I'm canceling my Vogue subscription. Who is with me???" That got Kardashian's best pal, Jonathan Cheban, tweeting back: "Do u matter?" Meanwhile, Seth Rogen and James Franco poked a little fun at the firestorm, tweeting out this photo of their heads on the couple. "It had to be done," Rogen added.

Quoted

"As for the cover, my opinion is that it is both charming and touching — and it was, I should add, entirely our idea to do it. You may have read that Kanye begged me to put his fiancee on Vogue's cover. He did nothing of the sort. The gossip might make better reading, but the simple fact of the matter is that it isn't true." Anna Wintour, in her cover letter

It's not easy being green

Box office. Audiences flocked to the YA movie "Divergent," skipping the new Kermit picture.

Ricky Gervais and Kermit's lookalikes failed in "Muppets." / DISNEY

By the numbers

1. 'Divergent' $56 million
2. 'Muppets Most Wanted' $16.5 million
3. 'Mr. Peabody & Sherman' $11.7 million
4. '300: Rise of an Empire' $8.7 million
5. 'God's Not Dead' $8.6 million

"Divergent," the story of a dystopian society that divides people based on personality traits, dominated weekend movie charts with $56 million in U.S. and Canadian ticket sales, kicking off a new franchise for "Hunger Games" producer Lions Gate Entertainment Corp.

Walt Disney's family comedy "Muppets Most Wanted" finished in second place, nabbing $16.5 million from Friday through Sunday. Animated "Mr. Peabody & Sherman," produced by Dreamworks Animation Inc, took the No. 3 slot with $11.7 million. (Both films, amusingly, feature Ty Burrell.)

The debut of "Divergent" fell short of the box office heights of two other young adult franchises. "Hunger Games" started with a massive $152.5 million in March 2012 while "Twilight" opened with $69.6 million in November 2008.

"Muppets Most Wanted," a sequel to a 2011 "Muppets" movie, stars Ricky Gervais, Tina Fey and Ty Burrell alongside Miss Piggy, Kermit the Frog and other classic Muppet characters. In the new film, Kermit is imprisoned in a Russian gulag in a case of mistaken identity, while an evil impostor travels with his muppet friends on a European tour.

Rounding out the domestic charts, Greek warrior sequel "300: Rise of an Empire" landed in fourth place with $8.7 million, while the independent faith-based new release "God's Not Dead" pulled in $8.6 million to claim the No. 5 spot. This makes the second religious film this year, after "Son of God," to become a hit. REUTERS

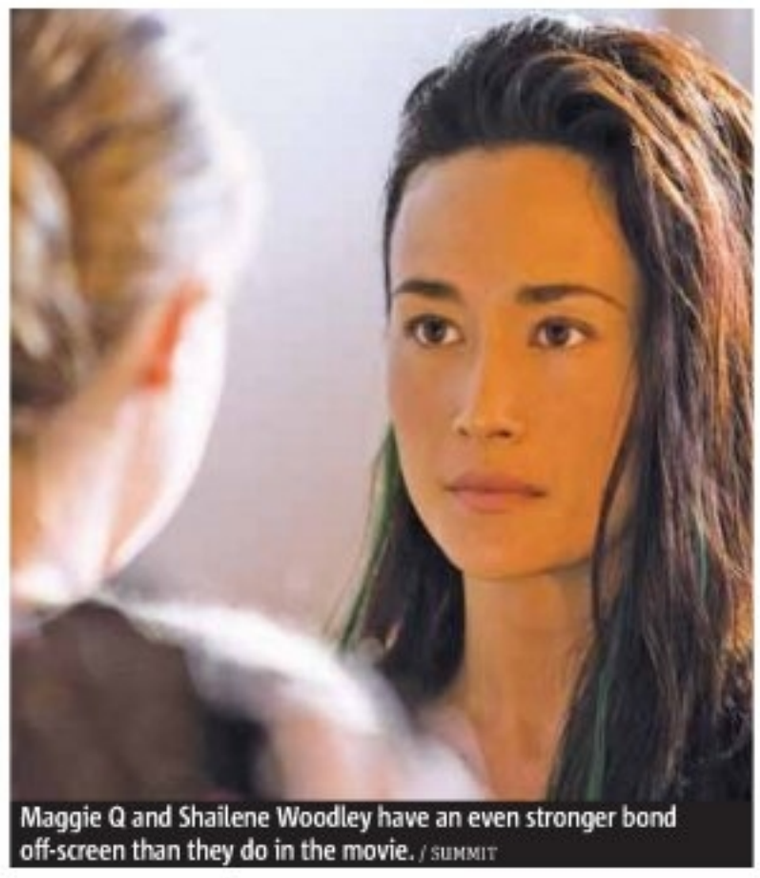
Maggie Q on her fearless new role in 'Divergent'



Maggie Q and Shailene Woodley have an even stronger bond off-screen than they do in the movie. / SUMMIT

Interview. It turns out Maggie Q is as brave in real life as she is on screen.

Leaping on to moving trains and jumping off buildings isn't something most people would rush to do, but then again, Maggie Q isn't most people. "I dive with sharks. ... I think it's really fun to explore that reckless side of yourself and have that glorified by everyone around you. Who doesn't want to experience that on some level?" she tells us.

It's no wonder she was right at home playing Tori in the new dystopian movie "Divergent." Based on the best-selling book by Veronica Roth and the first in a trilogy, "Divergent" is about a society divided into five factions, each heralding a specific virtue: knowledge, peace, honesty, selflessness and bravery. Maggie Q's character Tori is, of course, one of the brave, a faction that participates in the aforementioned leaping on to moving trains and jumping off buildings.

Tori is the first to realize Tris (played by Shailene Woodley) is "divergent," someone who won't fit in anywhere. "We had an instant chemistry the first time we read together, which is why I got the role," Maggie Q says of Woodley. "I love her. We feel like we were separated at birth. I look so forward to watching her grow in this business. She's a true talent, and seeing her flourish is going to be really great."

Quoted

"We feel like we were separated at birth."

Maggie Q, on co-star Woodley

Maggie Q doesn't think it will be just teens who will relate to the movie. "It has so many real-life lessons," she says. "The overarching theme is how the choices we make affect the rest of our lives. In the movie, it's an overt choice when you're 16 — but the truth is, our choices every day are always going to set us on a path and they affect those around us who we love as well."

Of course, every big blockbuster needs a heartthrob and "Divergent" found it in actor Theo James, who plays a fellow member of the bravest tribe, alongside Maggie Q. "When I saw him on screen in the movie, my stomach was just doing flip-flops because I was so excited. He's about to be the biggest heartthrob in the world, and I'm just so proud of Theo," she says.

EMILY LAURENCE
@EmLaurence
emily.laurence@metro.us

Long haul

Not diverging

Maggie Q is signed on for all three movies, and committing was yet another thing she did without fear.

"It's every actor's dream," she says of being tied to a project for so long. "It's the best problem to have, ever."

Instead, she was more concerned with her character.

"I [asked myself]: 'Do I like this character? Do I think I can bring something to her that no one else can? Does she have a journey in this series?' I felt that all those things were positive."

It also serves as a reminder that this movie is only the beginning.

Legendary lover gets an update

Now in previews at the Wilma Theater (265 S. Broad St., www.wilmatheater.org), "Don Juan" opens March 26. / ALEXANDER IZILIAEV

Theater. "Don Juan Comes Home From Iraq" puts the classic character in today's world.

The character of Don Juan has captivated artists in diverse mediums for centuries, from Mozart to Lord Byron to Johnny Depp. The latest exploits of the legendary lover come from the pen of Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright Paula Vogel. The Wilma Theater is presenting the world premiere of Vogel's "Don Juan Comes Home From Iraq," directed by Blanka Zizka.

"I'm always incredibly moved when we have certain themes that generation after generation pick up as deep archetypes," Vogel says. Her version of the story was inspired by Austro-Hungarian playwright Odon von Horvath's 1936 piece "Don Juan Comes Back From the War," which follows the lothario's return to Germany after fighting in World War I.

"Horvath responded to all of the Don Juans of myth, but asked what it would be like to be a Don Juan who survived four years in the trenches and comes home," she explains. "What happens to his incredible appetite for seduction and ability to cast aside women? What happens to his desire for conquest when one has been conquered by war?"

Asking the same questions about an American Don Juan returning from our current conflicts in Iraq and Afghanistan, Vogel embarked on a two-year script development process at the Wilma that included interviews and workshops with veterans and military, drawing on their feelings and experiences to answer questions about her own modern-day Don Juan.

"I wanted to find out what happens to us as human beings in the 21st century fighting a war where you're 1 percent of the population living a completely different existence than a civilian back home," Vogel says. The Wilma residency was her first experience writing for a particular group of actors and technicians, and she responded by, she says, "trying to write little valentines" to everyone in the company. But mostly she wanted to find a connection to the country's fighting men and women that she feels has been lacking.

"I went into this process very scared that I hadn't been paying attention to our wars other than on half-hour news broadcasts every night. ... I feel like, as Americans, we're doing a lot of not looking," she says.

A FRIENDLY MEET-UP: TO SPILL OR NOT TO SPILL?

The question

I recently had a drink with an old girlfriend from high school who was in town for the weekend. The relationship is platonic. But I didn't tell my wife, and when she found out through a friend of mine, she completely flipped out. Was I wrong not to tell her, even if I knew it would make her upset?

Consider what your intentions were. / PURESTOCK

Sometimes it may be a kindness not to trouble our loved ones with minor, seemingly innocuous matters that would upset them. But innocuous is relative. In this case, your lapse in disclosure seems to suggest a deeper issue of trust between you and your wife and, perhaps, between you and yourself.

Say you didn't tell your wife because you assumed she wouldn't understand and would assume the worst. What does this say about your assessment of her faith in you? Reflect on whether you've ever given her any reason for her not to trust you. If you haven't always been transparent and faithful, there may be a good reason why she is especially sensitive and reluctant to believe that your rendezvous is innocent. If that were true, you may want to think twice next time about keeping secrets.

Now, let's address your faith in your wife. Suppose you've never given her any reason not to trust you. Do you trust her to be someone who can anchor herself in the strength of your relationship and quell any irrational fears or flashes of jealousy? If not, you might have considered inviting her along, or perhaps even calling her from the bar to reassure her, slipping in an "I love you" so both women know where they stand.

Finally, do you trust yourself? When setting out for this drink, was a part of you hoping to rekindle a spark? If so, consider exploring your feelings about your marriage. Is momentary satisfaction really worth jeopardizing your marriage?

I suggest starting a dialogue about trust in your marriage. If that feels scary, a couple's therapist could help.

Myths about American schools

See more at www.metro.us

Fact or fiction. Authors and educators show that many citizens' conception of K-12 public education in the U.S. is more myth than reality.

The book "50 Myths and Lies That Threaten America's Public Schools: The Real Crisis in Education" is exactly what it purports to be: a compilation of false but pervasive claims — about the public-school system, teaching methods and how students learn — coupled with research-supported refutations of those claims.

The two lead authors, David C. Berliner and Gene Glass, worked with a team of 19 other researchers in the field of education and cited hundreds of studies in their arguments.

"It pains us to see teaching turned into mind-numbing coaching for standardized tests," says Dr. Glass. And he knows that this project may ruffle some feathers. "To talk about our schools being 'threatened,' or to imply that some in the education-reform business might not be 100 percent truthful, is pretty strong language," he says. "Unfortunately the times call for strong language."

Here are six myths you need to stop believing:

Myth: International tests show that the United States has a second-rate education system.

Truth: We lead the world in the number of high performers. The percentage of low performers correlates with our country's high child-poverty rate, which has long been linked to low test scores.

Myth: Private schools are better than public schools.

Truth: After isolating variables such as poverty and parental involvement — proven to most affect academic achievement — public school students were actually found to outperform their private school peers.

Myth: Charter schools are better than traditional public schools.

Quoted

"To talk about our schools being 'threatened,' or to imply that some in the education-reform business might not be 100 percent truthful, is pretty strong language."

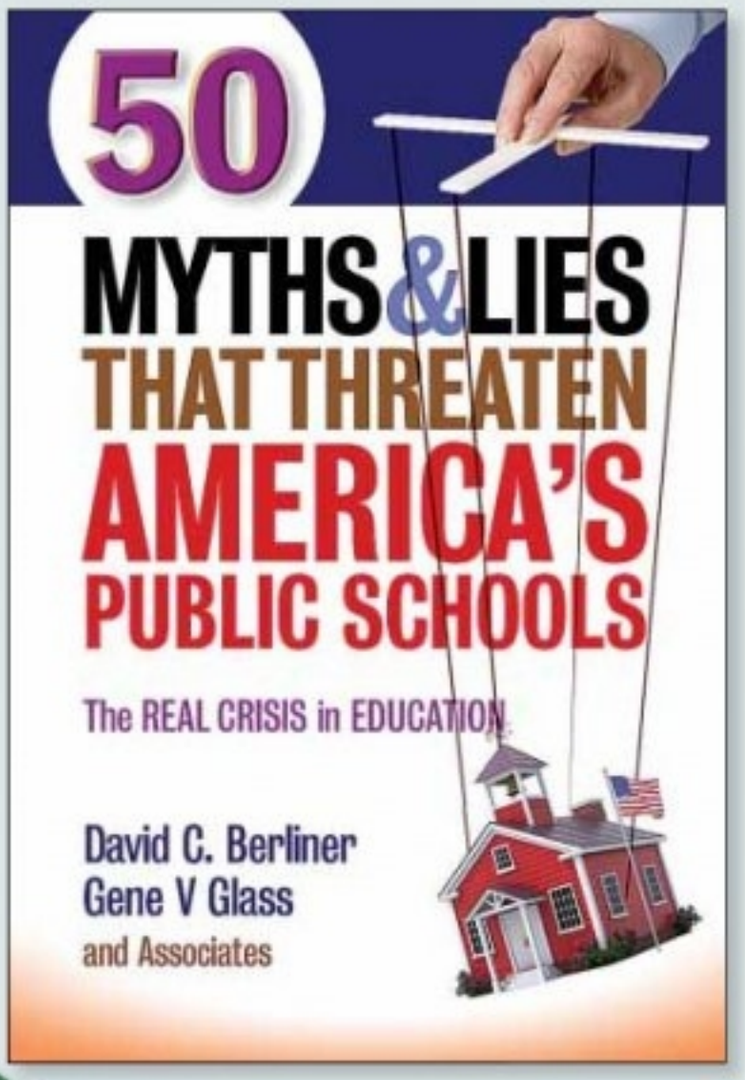
Holding us back

Myth: Retaining children in a grade — "flunking" them — helps struggling students catch up and promotes better classroom instruction for all.

Truth: Studies done on statistically similar children, one promoted and one flunked, report that the promoted child usually performs better in the higher grade — otherwise, the two do about the same on tests.



Myth: Teachers should be evaluated on the basis of the performance of their students.

Truth: "Value-added measurement" methods have led to the neglect of poorer students, whose scores tend to be lower, and to school systems that cheat by making tests easier. Meanwhile, there have been no changes in the achievement gap, and testing gains on whole are small.

Myth: Homework boosts achievement.

Truth: Multiple studies have found no link between homework and achievement. In the author's words, "There is more credible scholarship on the negative effects of homework than on its merits."

Dating within the workplace.

Fifty-six percent of professionals claim to have participated in a relationship in the office

See more at www.metro.us

Involved in an office romance? You're in the majority. / COLOURBOX

While it may seem apparent that workplace romances are shedding their stigma, a new study from Vault.com shows that the balance is actually tipping so far in the opposite direction that dating is now the norm: Fifty-six percent of the business professionals surveyed said they have participated in a relationship with a co-worker.

"I think generally there's been a breaking down of barriers between personal and work lives that goes back at least a couple of decades. It started with the advent of cellphones and email and has continued gathering speed ever since," says Philip Stott, editor at Vault.com.

"That same technology also facilitates relationships between people in ways that weren't possible when you had to time your trips to the water cooler — and risk being away from your desk — if you wanted to flirt with a colleague," Stott explains. "Add in the fact that the amount of time the average employee is spending at work has been steadily creeping up, and you start to wonder how relationships ever get started anywhere else."

For the people behind the survey, the most surprising fact was how differently men and women approached relationships.

"What did stand out this year were the different experiences being reported by men and women. Women are much more likely to report that a relationship with a colleague turned into something serious, for example, while men are more likely to have had casual flings," says Stott.

Men vs. women

The survey also found that women are more likely to date a supervisor, while men are more likely to date a subordinate. Even though the data doesn't look any closer at the reasons why, Stott offers an explanation.

- "At present, only 46 of Fortune's top 1,000 companies are led by a woman — a stat that suggests that the pool of talent right below CEO is also heavily male-dominated. With that lack of balance, it's no surprise that the majority of relationships between colleagues at different levels in the company would involve a higher-placed male colleague."

Horoscope

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. There seems to be a lot of anxiety and frustration in the air around you. Don't get caught up in everyone else's business.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. Don't give in to other people's demands. Trying to please everyone will leave you frazzled and ready to blow.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. A great chance for a new position should be considered. Resolve any issues that could deter you from getting ahead.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. Concentrate on improving your cash flow. Don't risk being criticized by someone because you strayed from the truth or didn't stick to the rules.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Share your home-improvement strategies. Your creativity will shine if you put your plans into action. Live up to a promise.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb 18. Find an innovative way to boost your income. Consider your strengths and weaknesses, and devise a plan.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. If you want your plans approved, you will need to be upfront about any foreseeable difficulties and offer concrete solutions.

Reagan raised GDP spending, then razed the USSR

Re: 'Reagan did help world redecorate without the Iron Curtain' (Metro, March 18)
Timothy Laren incorrectly says that the U.S. did not get help from France during The Revolutionary War. Without France's monetary support, as well as many of France's generals and other military officers, we would have lost in a year or two.

Also, my political science professor in 1977 told the class that the USSR was spending 22 percent of its GDP, while the U.S. was only spending 6 percent of its GDP. He correctly predicted that we would win the Cold War because of economics. Reagan increased our GDP spending to over 9 percent, which forced the USSR to increase to near 35 percent of GDP.

This action weakened the USSR logistically (feeding their troops) which allowed the Soviet states to protest against a weakened USSR. The USSR was going broke. Ask any general and he will tell you that "an army marches on its stomach."

This is why Reagan is credited with the USSR downfall.

Hot corner

Phillies name third baseman

After a pretty competitive battle for the starting role at third, the Phillies officially selected Cody Asche as their opening day starter. Maikel Franco, who hit 31 homers in the minors last year, will start 2014 in Triple-A.

Flyers show they can compete against best

NHL. The Flyers are taking on the league's best and winning convincingly.

Having beaten every team in the West — besides Anaheim — the surging Flyers seem poised to make things interesting in the Stanley Cup Finals.

Now all they have to do is find a way to get out of the East to give themselves a chance at the prize that has eluded them for nearly four decades.

After taking it to the St. Louis Blues, currently No. 1 in the West, 4-1 Saturday, the Flyers have won five straight to move into the second in the Metropolitan Division behind the Penguins. They've showed they can play with anybody, having beaten Pittsburgh twice, the reigning champion Blackhawks and now the Blues within a spectacular eight-day span. No wonder they're brimming with confidence.

Wayne Simmonds is one of seven 15-plus goal scorers on the Flyers this season. / GETTY IMAGES

"I think we've proven that we're a good hockey club," said Mason, who won his 30th game of the season Saturday. "We're beating teams that come playoff time you're going to have to go through to the ultimate goal, the Stanley Cup. We think we can go against anybody."

In this case it was a St. Louis team that in no way resembles your Grandfather's Blues, back when the Plager Brothers and Noel Picard used to physically intimidate the Flyers back in Philadelphia's pre-Cup years.

These Blues still play physical, but they also have a number of skill players, among them recent Team USA Olympians T.J. Oshie, David Backes and Kevin Shattenkirk.

Then again, these aren't your grandpa's Flyers either. Craig Berube's club now 15-9-2 against the West.

"The West, they play a big-bodied game," said Wayne Simmonds. "They grind down low a lot and like to work the other team's D. I think that's kind of the identity our team is starting to take on. If we're going to play like we're a Western Conference team, that's fine with me."

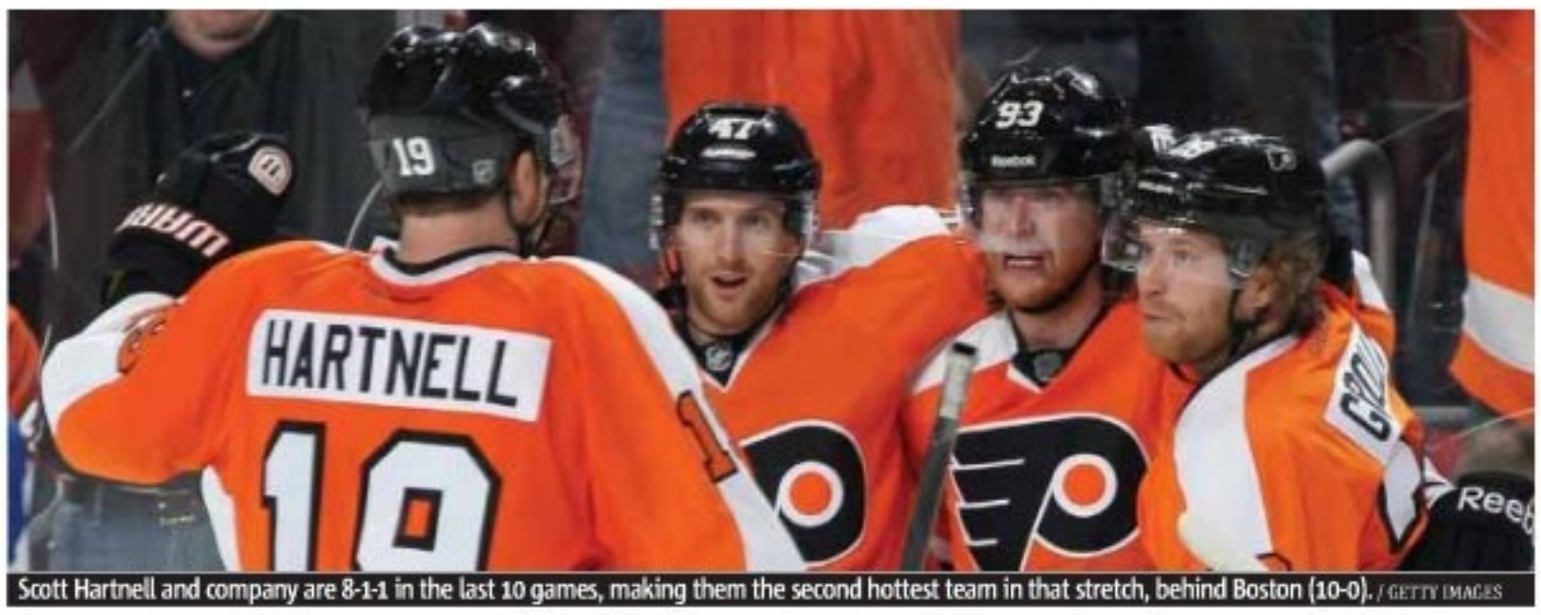
NHL. Flyers seek sixth straight win against Los Angeles



Scott Hartnell and company are 8-1-1 in the last 10 games, making them the second hottest team in that stretch, behind Boston (10-0). / GETTY IMAGES

Tonight yet one more Western power comes to town to face the Flyers at the Wells Fargo Center, and it's not just any team.

Mike Richards and Jeff Carter will be returning to their old stomping grounds for the first time since they and the L.A. Kings won the 2012 Cup.

"It should be an emotional game for them," Flyers captain Claude Giroux said. "They did a lot of good things in Philly for our organization, and personally I respect them a lot, so it's going to be a good game. I think we find our best games when we know we're playing a really good team. We kind of dial it up and play better."

In the process the 38-25-7 Flyers have finally built a mini-cushion in the crowded Metropolitan playoff picture, holding a one-point lead over the Rangers for second — with two games in hand.

Alexander Ovechkin and the Caps, who also have played two more games, are four points back, with Columbus five off the pace.

Still, there's no time to relax, or all that could disappear in a hurry.

"Right now it's imperative for us to get points," veteran defenseman Braydon Coburn said. "But I think the guys do a good job getting up for the challenge. The teams coming in here, we know how good they are.

"But there's no easy game this time of year."

There won't be once the playoffs get underway, either. But the way the Flyers have been going, that doesn't seem so daunting.

"We looked at this stretch here that it would be a big measuring stick for us," said Scott Hartnell, whose early second period power play goal tied the game and turned the momentum in the Flyers' favor. "A chance to see how we do against some of the best talent in the league and some of the best teams in the league.

"We played some of our best hockey. Now we just have to keep it going."

Having proven they can conquer the West, it may be only a matter of time before the entire hockey world begins to take notice. JON MARKS

Relentless road

Even after the Kings on Monday night, the Flyers face a daunting week.

- Philadelphia heads to Madison Square Garden to take on division foes the Rangers (39-29-4) on Wednesday night.
- The Flyers host the Maple Leafs (36-28-8) Friday, a team battling to make the playoffs.
- Sunday at 12:30, Philly hosts the Atlantic-leading Bruins (49-17-5).

Jackson on block as rumors swirl

NFL. Reports are claiming DeSean Jackson's departure is a matter of when, not if.

With so much uncertainty amid the Eagles' situation with Pro Bowl wide receiver DeSean Jackson, one thing seems consistent no matter where you look.

He is as good as gone.

The star is due $10.25 million this season, and reports have said Jackson is refusing to renegotiate with the Eagles.

The team is seeking a third-round pick at the very least for the wide-out, but it is also possible they will shed his salary, and his baggage, by cutting him outright.

DeSean Jackson / GETTY IMAGES

With so much firepower in the Eagles offensive attack, Jackson would be the top weapon, lining up with Jeremy Maclin, Riley Cooper, Zach Ertz and Darren Sproles among others.

But Eagles fans will probably never get the chance to see how good that offense could be, with a source close to Jackson saying he is "as good as gone."

NFL Network reported last week that the Jets, Panthers and Raiders each made inquiries.

Last week, Eagles head coach Chip Kelly made jokes about the whole situation.

"He's a priority at receiver, before Maclin, behind Cooper — or is it Cooper before Maclin, or Maclin before Cooper?" Kelly said. "So I'll check what you write, and I'll tell you how we feel about it."

Offense shines in Phillies' win against Twins

Domonic Brown / GETTY IMAGES

Spring training is a long stretch of time, lasting well over a full month.

And sometimes it feels like an eternity between when pitchers and catchers report, and when opening day arrives.

With just one week left until the Phillies open the season against the Texas Rangers next Monday, Philadelphia is starting to look like a big league baseball team.

Against the Twins on Sunday, the offense and Kyle Kendrick looked to be in mid-season form, pounding out 11 hits in a 5-1 win.

The Phillies regulars shined, with Domonic Brown hitting two doubles, Jimmy Rollins blasting a home run, and Marlon Byrd tallying two singles.

Kendrick, in this third appearance this spring, went six innings, allowing one run and six hits.

Closer Jonathan Papelbon tossed a scoreless frame in relief as well.

Other good news came from Clearwater, after ace Cole Hamels pitched to live batters for the first time this spring.

The lefty said he "feels great" after tossing a pair of simulated 15-pitch innings.

Most important in the performance was Hamels' comfort on the mound after taking a simulated break between innings.

He is expected to return around May 1, but he could appear earlier if he continues to feel good. EVAN MACY

Sixers' skid showing no end in sight

NBA. The 76ers travel to face San Antonio looking to avoid making more dubious history.

It's a sad fact for Sixers fans, but the lowly team is almost worth watching again.

Not because they are playing good basketball, but because the team is history in the making.

Facing Western Conference foes the Spurs in San Antonio on Monday night at 8:30 p.m., the 76ers are just two losses away from tying the all-time record for consecutive defeats.

They have 24 setbacks in a row, and if they couldn't take care of business against the Magic or Bucks, it would be surprising to see them prevail against the Southwest-leading Spurs.

"There's a win in this group," coach Brett Brown, formerly a Spurs assistant, told reporters. "We will continue to fight and continue to stay together. I'm just thrilled. I'm proud of their ability, their character, to stay together in what's clearly difficult times."

Do you have blockages in your heart arteries?
Are you worried about your risk of having a heart attack?
Doctors at the University of Pennsylvania are launching a research study looking at the effects of a new medication to lower triglycerides, a type of fat in the blood. The entire study lasts about 3 months and may include a screening visit, 2 overnight visits to the research center at the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania, up to 5 exercise stress tests, and up to 4 MRI's. Participants will be compensated up to $1800 for their time and effort.
If you are at least 40, and take medication to control your cholesterol, and have a history of heart disease, or have been told you are at a high risk of a future heart attack you may qualify for our research study.

Healthy Volunteers Needed for Research Study
The UPenn Department of Anesthesiology & Critical Care is looking for healthy, non-obese (BMI < 30) males and females, ages 20-40, to participate in a research study looking at the unconscious brain while under general anesthesia to determine how the brain reconstructs itself after anesthesia. This study randomizes (like a fill of a coin) subjects into two groups: 1. General anesthesia (3.5 hours) and cognitive testing, or 2. Resting period (3.5 hours) and cognitive testing.

Study subjects will have a full history and physical examination prior to the study. All subjects will have a drug test. Women will be required to take a pregnancy test. Subjects will have their "brain waves" monitored while taking cognitive tests before, during, and after anesthesia or resting period.

All subjects will be paid $250 (anesthesia) / $125 (resting) at the completion of the study. There are no expenses to the subject.

To learn more about participating in the study, contact the University of Pennsylvania Department of Anesthesia & Critical Care at 215-573-8209.
